School of Communications

- One of 18 private universities in the nation accredited by ACEJMC
- More than 1,200 students and 60 full-time faculty members
- Undergraduate majors in Journalism, Strategic Communications, Cinema & Television Arts, Communication Design and Media Analytics
- A master’s program in Interactive Media
- Pioneered the Elon in LA program

ARRIVING FALL 2016

One of the nation’s finest communications schools deserves one of the nation’s finest facilities. Elon University broke ground in summer 2015 on two new buildings that will merge with two existing buildings to create a Communications Commons in the heart of campus.

A grand atrium will connect the current facility with a new building that will feature a 250-seat movie theatre. Student media will be converged, and one of the current studios will become transparent to an outdoor plaza.

A very warm welcome to BEA 2016 from your 2016 Program Chair! Whether you’re a first timer or a seasoned BEA veteran, I know you’ll find much of interest in the numerous panels, programs and sessions we’ve crafted for you over the next few days. Our spotlight theme “Content is King: Storytelling Across Platforms” is extremely relevant in a world where we get and convey information across many different platforms…but sometimes can forget that we are still at heart, storytellers. Bringing the focus back to content allows us to explore the many different ways stories can be told across genres and platforms as well as in the classroom.

To that end, we’ve recruited a myriad of great storytellers…all of whom are crafting stories across different platforms in unique ways. Our keynote speaker is one such person. Bruce Rosenblum is CEO of the Academy of Television Arts where he is constantly focused on finding and telling compelling stories in new ways all while adjusting to a constantly changing media system. Rowan University brings you a conversation with Frank Spotnitz, the creative force behind Amazon’s recent miniseries ‘The Man in the High Castle” and countless classic episodes of FOX’s “The X-Files.” The Television Academy Foundation takes you into the world of ‘reality TV’ with the man widely credited for creating today’s modern reality genre, Jonathan Murray. And learn more about women leading media today in one of our many special sessions throughout the convention.

There’s plenty on the academic side as well, including our 2016 Research Symposium that tackles the issues of Risk and Health Communication in an Evolving Media Environment. Check out our ‘non-poster’ poster sessions, where you can learn about many interesting research topics—on a big screen. You won’t want to miss the always entertaining “pitch session” where you might hear the next great idea for a hit program, then visit “BEA Ignite” to learn new tips and tricks for engaged classroom teaching. You can even learn how to fly a drone (legally) in a Tuesday session this year! And don’t forget, we have more than 100 panelists presenting cutting edge academic research on themes that stretch across all 17 of our research divisions (and you could even be a part of helping us create an 18th). You’ll also want to make sure you view some of our award winning entries in this year’s Festival of Media Arts. With a record number of entries (more than 1500) you’re sure to be amazed at the creativity of faculty and students from universities around the globe. And students, don’t forget to get going on your job hunt with the annual BEA/NAB Career Fair Wednesday!

Putting this convention together was an honor and a privilege and I have to thank the three people that make all this possible every year, our rock star BEA team of Heather Birks, JD Boyle and Traci Bailey. I could not have done this without their tireless support and encouragement. Thanks also to 2017 Program Chair Christine Taylor for leading the charge for our non-poster poster sessions and Festival of Media Arts Chair Lowell Briggs for guiding a cast of hundreds through a very complicated process.

As a former television news producer and reporter, associate professor and proud BEA member of ten years and counting, I can tell you that tackling a convention of this size and reputation has been one of the most challenging yet rewarding things I have done in my career. I thank everyone who submitted panels and sessions, offered ideas and suggestions when in desperate need of them, and in general helped create what you are about to experience over the next four days. My final piece of advice for having a great BEA convention: explore everything, attend as many things as you can, make connections and contacts and most importantly, be amazed and enthralled by the kinds of storytelling that is happening all around you. Enjoy!

BEA2017 Research Symposium
Video Games: A Medium that Demands Our Attention

Sunday, April 23, 2017, Las Vegas Westgate
Chair: Nicholas David Bowman, West Virginia University
Email: Nicholas.Bowman@mail.wvu.edu

Paper Deadline: December 1, 2016

From the first “interactive computer demonstrations” at MIT in the 1950s to the blockbuster Grand Theft Auto V in 2013 (the highest-selling packaged media product of all-time), video games have continually captured the public’s imagination and interest. Video games are credited with improving the skills of pilots and surgeons and encouraging murder and mayhem. The gaming industry’s revenues have continually exceeded the film industry, while debates rage as to whether games are toys or more serious forms of art. Games are celebrated for their ability to spark children’s emotions, and chided for corrupting their morals. Finally, games are regarded as social media technologies that encourage interaction, while also regarded as distractions from reality that result in social isolation.

Scholars are invited to submit research reports or theoretical syntheses (4000-word limit, inclusive) focused on one of the four conference tracks:

• Gaming as Cognitive Demand
  Chaired by: C. Shawn Green, University of Wisconsin-Madison

• Gaming as Emotional Demand
  Chaired by: Matthew Grizzard, University of Buffalo

• Gaming as Behavioral Demand
  Chaired by: Allison Eden, Michigan State University

• Gaming as Social Demand
  Chaired by: Jorge Peña, University of California - Davis

The one-stop resource for students in filmmaking

Filmmaking in Action
An Introduction

Adam Leipzig | Barry Weiss | Michael Goldman

Whether they're aiming for YouTube, the Clios, Sundance, or the Oscars, Filmmaking in Action helps you teach your students about all aspects of filmmaking. From script to camera, from production to distribution and marketing, and everything in between, it's all here.

Adam Leipzig, former President of National Geographic Films, and Barry Weiss, former head of animation at Sony Pictures, are longtime insiders in the film community. Along with prominent journalist and industry expert, Michael Goldman, they offer invaluable experiences and ideas to share, plus unparalleled access to the industry's most accomplished and insightful professionals.

When the book is packaged with LaunchPad for Filmmaking in Action, readers gain access to exclusive “How do I?” tips videos with professionals who have worked on movies like Ant Man, Argo, Divergent, Unbroken, The LEGO Movie, Inception, Fight Club, Pineapple Express, Nebraska, The Imitation Game, Alice in Wonderland, Titanic, The Rock, Winter's Bone, Star Wars, and many more.

LaunchPad can be packaged with the book at no additional charge.

Get the full film experience—now integrated with film clips throughout.

The Film Experience
An Introduction

Fourth Edition

Timothy Corrigan, University of Pennsylvania | Patricia White, Swarthmore College

In our culture, watching movies is a universal experience – but understanding film may not be. The Film Experience reaches out to students, connecting their experiences watching movies with better understanding and knowledge of the medium's full scope.

With its game-changing new video program in LaunchPad Solo, this thoroughly updated new edition makes it easier than ever to link each student's personal viewing to a greater overall understanding of film. Now your students can see film concepts in action. Film clips with accompanying questions for marginal Viewing Cues, Film in Focus boxes, and Form in Action boxes are integrated into the text, illustrating concepts quickly and clearly.

LaunchPad Solo for The Film Experience can be packaged with the book at no additional charge.

Minority Workshops for High School Students [Session ID: 1093588]
Conference Room 1/2
[Multicultural Studies | News]
Attracting minority students to broadcast and communication programs is an important initiative for colleges, universities, and eventually, newsrooms. Broadcast workshops for minority communities can be one of the best tools to nurture diverse, future media-makers. But these programs aren’t without their obstacles; fundraising, recruitment, productions, and partnerships take time to nurture. This panel will examine the challenges of these educational workshop programs in broadcast journalism, and the importance of these efforts.
Moderator: Norm Medoff, Northern Arizona University
Panelists: Toni DeAztlan-Smith, Northern Arizona University; Award-winning journalist and television news producer, former field producer, videographer and editor for NBC News and CBS News
Anna Marie Romero, Executive Director, Missouri Interscholastic Press Association & Director, Missouri Urban Journalism Workshop
Melanie Wilderman, Associate Professor & Executive Director of Oklahoma Scholastic Media

9:00 AM – 10:15 AM
Content creation and copyright in the global over-the-Top Television Media Landscape [Session ID: 1093947]
Conference Room 4/5
[International | Management, Marketing and Programming]
This panel examines the reach and global impact of over-the-top (OTT) television, effects of altered viewing habits on content creation, and intellectual property rights in a global multi-platform environment. OTT TV services cross international borders, for example, Netflix aims to expand its services to 200 countries by 2017 from its current some 50 countries. When OTT service providers cross international borders to reach larger audiences, content creators must re-examine intellectual property rights.
Moderator: Helena Vanhala, Robert Morris University
Panelists: Bill Loving, California Polytechnic State University; Copyright in a Multi-Platform Environment
Helena Vanhala, Robert Morris University; Content Creation in the Age of Binge-Viewing
Tim Hudson, Point Park University; Over-the-Top Television: An International Perspective

Putting the Community in Community Engaged Learning: The Positives and the Pitfalls [Session ID: 1093992]
Pavilion 9
[Curriculum, Assessment and Administration | Student Media Advisors]
Community engaged learning gives students professional work experience solving real world problems while working for actual professional partners. The rewards seem to outweigh the risks. But these partnerships can sometimes create challenges, no matter the discipline in which you work. This panel will explore the best practices and the pitfalls of working with and creating content for partners in your community. You’ll leave with guidelines for creating and working with these types of projects.

          Julian Rodriguez, University of Texas - Arlington
          LaDonna Aiken, University of Texas - Arlington
Disease outbreaks, terrorist acts, and natural disasters are obvious examples of contexts in which risk and health communication play a critical role. Broadcasting media have found risk and health crisis events to be particularly seductive as stories that fascinate their audiences. Moreover, with digital media evolving at such a rapid rate, many members of the audience have taken on the role of newsmaker or reporter—we are not entirely certain to what effect. Many in the risk and health communication research communities find extreme events and hazardous contexts to be on the increase, and an evolving media landscape introduces both challenges and opportunities for using communication to manage these situations.

This symposium will address these issues as well as the research implications inherent in risk and health communication contexts. For example, how are these contexts best approached—inductively or deductively? How do researchers balance scientific finding with social and cultural issues? To what extent can media (legacy and digital) play a role in mitigating the effects of risk and adverse health events? How are potential ethical repercussions of communication disentangled from the unfolding and unpredictable events? How do we study an increasingly media-savvy society with traditional research methods?

9:00 AM – 10:15 AM | Advances in Health Communication Research
Moderator: Michel M. Haigh, Pennsylvania State University

There and Back Again: An Overview and History of Health Communication
Teresa Thompson, University of Dayton

Media Literacy and Parent-Adolescent Communication about Alcohol in Media: Effects on Adolescent Alcohol Use

Media Analytics: Tracking Audiences in an Evolving Media Landscape [Session ID: 1114720]

Pavilion 3
[Research]

Tracking media audiences is a major challenge for content providers in a rapidly changing media environment. Media analytics is the practice of understanding audience consumption patterns in traditional media distribution systems and a broad range of online and mobile applications, including: social media, streaming, and on-demand. Today, media analytics help determine the success of content and drive business decision-making in all media companies. The study of media analytics requires a conceptual knowledge of the role of the broad range of media, skills in research and writing, understanding the tools of technology that make analytics possible, and a strategic mindset to provide insights and apply findings. This roundtable will consider how academic programs in communications should best prepare students with the knowledge and skills to understand today’s media audiences.

learn about the latest developments in media and in broadcast education?

Do all of this and more at the Broadcast Education Association’s Fall Super-Regional Conference at the University of South Carolina!

October 13-15, 2016
The Broadcast Education Association announces a call for papers, productions, and panel submissions for the 2016 BEA Super-Regional Conference. Submissions may be made in four categories:

1. Paper submissions (completed papers)
2. Research in progress (abstracts and partial papers)
3. Panel proposals related to any area of media or media education, with particular emphasis on broadcasting or multi-platform.
4. Faculty and Student creative works (see categories below)

All submissions will be refereed by at least two reviewers.

Creative works are welcome in the following categories: audio, documentary, interactive multimedia, news, and sports. An Open category will also be included for entries that do not fit into one of these categories (such as narrative film and multi-cam). The creative works competition is open to faculty and students who completed their entry while employed or enrolled full-time at a college or university. You do not need to be a BEA member to enter. Faculty winners are expected to attend the conference for the public screening of their work. Submission fee: $25 per entry.

In addition to the paper and production competitions, this conference will include training sessions on Apple Final Cut X as well as Adobe After Effects, Audition, Dreamweaver, InDesign, Photoshop, Premiere Pro, and Avid Pro Tools. All conference attendees will receive admission to one 2.5 hour training session at no charge, with additional sessions available for a $25 fee each. More details on the conference and the training are available on the conference website.

The conference begins with a full day of training sessions, opening reception and keynote speech Thursday, October 13. Paper presentations, panels and screenings of creative work take place October 14 and 15. Registration fees include the Thursday reception, Friday lunch, one training session and all snack breaks. Registration categories are as follows:

- BEA Members: $100
- Non-Members: $150
- Students: $50

Papers and panel proposals should be submitted electronically. Submission Deadline: June 15, 2016. Notification of acceptance on or before July 15, 2016.

All Creative productions should be submitted electronically. Submission Deadline: August 1, 2016. Notification of acceptance on or before September 1, 2016.

Registration forms, submission links and training schedules/reservations will be available online on or before September 1, 2016.

News & Storytelling: There’s an App for That! [Session ID: 1093704]

Pavilion 11

[News | Student Media Advisors]

Faculty & professionals share assessments of smartphone apps they use for news and storytelling. Each panelist quickly offers examples of content posted; addresses how they have integrated it in the workplace or classroom; offers a review of the app (is it free or paid; IOS or Android); identifies the benefits/features and the shortcomings; and responds to each other and the audience on the functionality, limits and how the content is received by the storytellers and online users. This panel showcases a diverse group of professionals, faculty and experts putting various apps through the paces.

Moderator: Bradley L. Weaver, Westminster College, Pennsylvania

Rowan University Presents...A Conversation with.....Frank Spotnitz [Session ID: 1131835]

Pavilion 3
[All Convention]

Every year BEA is fortunate to partner with Rowan University on this one of kind session. Join Rowan University's Mike Donovan and David Bianculli, also of NPR's Fresh Air fame, for this year's conversation with Frank Spotnitz.

Frank Spotnitz is currently writing and executive producing the first-season Amazon drama series The Man in the High Castle, based on the classic alternative history novel by Philip K. Dick. It is a co-production between Big Light, Scott Free Productions, Headline Pictures and Electric Shepherd Productions and became available to stream in November 2015. The series pilot episode became available in January 2015 to strong support from audiences, and it became the most viewed pilot in Amazon's history. The Los Angeles Times described the pilot as “provocative” and “smartly adapted by The X-Files’ Frank Spotnitz.” The Daily Telegraph said it was “absorbing” and Wired called it “must-see viewing.” Entertainment Weekly said it was “engrossing” and “a triumph in world-building,” cheering, “The Man in the High Castle is king.”

Previously Spotnitz directed two episodes and wrote or co-wrote more than 40 episodes of The X-Files television series. He served as a producer and co-writer of both X-Files feature films, “Fight the Future” (1998) and “I Want to Believe” (2008). Spotnitz shares three Golden Globes for Best Dramatic Series and a Peabody Award for his work on The X-Files. He was also nominated for an Emmy Award for writing and three times for Outstanding Drama Series.

Multiple Mediums, Multiple Narratives: Teaching Students How to Create Stories for a Screen-Saturated Society [Session ID: 1087584]

Pavilion 10

[Curriculum, Assessment and Administration | Interactive Media and Emerging Technologies]

The world is becoming more fragmented, but advertisers and journalists understand that a good story can unite people despite people’s relationship with media shifting to multiple screens and diverse devices. The medium, however, is not neutral. As a result, broadcast educators need to help their students develop a literacy on how to court viewers participating on these distinct platforms and channels. The participants of the proposed panel will focus on sharing with educators innovative assignment ideas, creative messaging and storytelling strategies, and tools that can encourage immersion to transport viewers through the emotional and psychological journey of a good story.

Moderators: Serena Carpenter, Michigan State University

Panelists:
- Debora Wenger, University of Mississippi
- Mike Reilley, Arizona State University
- Nicholas Whitaker, Media Outreach Manager on the News Lab at Google

12:00 PM – 1:15 PM

My Favorite Intermediate Video Production Assignment [Session ID: 1079975]

Pavilion 11

[Production Aesthetics & Criticism]

In beginning filmmaking/video production classes we try and teach students the basics of writing, camera operation, audio recording, lighting and editing. Usually, we have less time to devote to the creative side of filmmaking. As students move on in their filmmaking education there are many other skills we want them to master in writing, storytelling, shooting, lighting, editing and sound. In this panel four filmmaking professors each share one of their favorite video production activities from their intermediate video/film production classes to enhance student creativity.

Moderator: Donald Pollock, University of La Verne

Panelists:
- Jose AngelSoto, DePaul University; One on One
- Donald Pollock, University of La Verne; Writing a script for visuals based on what images and story the sound design suggests
- George Chun Han Wang, University of Hawaii at Manoa; ADR & Foley Assignment
- Suzanne Chandler, University of Oklahoma; Using light to contribute to the story

Producing Producers: Dealing with Automation, and Movable, Graphic Heavy Newsets [Session ID: 1093954]
Ballroom G
[News | Student Media Advisors]
Producing television news now requires more than just good writing, creative story selection and placement, and juggling lots of balls at the same time. Producers now have to deal with automated production systems such as Ignite, and new sets that have multiple anchor and reporter locations, graphic walls and monitors, or even sets that aren't really there—they're virtual. This panel will provide advice on teaching these skills from professors and professionals doing it.

Teaching Media Industries Courses in a Converged World [Session ID: 1093987]
Conference Room 4/5
[Management, Marketing and Programming]
As Silicon Valley and Hollywood continue to integrate, how do we teach our students about today's media industries? How are they distinct from other industrial sectors? Which trends are mere flashes-in-the-pan, and which have staying power? This workshop brings together prominent media industry professors with several decades of experience teaching courses in media industries to discuss the challenges and opportunities we face teaching students in various kinds of institutional settings and at various levels.
Moderator: Timothy Havens, University of Iowa

Painting by Numbers: Writing a Program Review [Session ID: 1093643]
Pavilion 1
[Curriculum, Assessment and Administration]
In the program review, content is king. A program review will identify strengths, weaknesses and areas of growth. It can develop strategies and tactics to better prepare your students to enter the field. A program review can also end your degree program. This panel will cover: preparing for a program review, the content needed, the gathering of data, analysis needed, ways to deal with the results, and how to tell the story.
Moderator: Amy Crawford, Youngstown State University
Panelists: John MacKerron, Towson University
            John Taylor, Eastern Kentucky University

Reimagining Student Media in the Digital Age [Session ID: 1093771]
Pavilion 2
[Student Media Advisors | Radio & Audio Media]
The classic discussion about the electronic sandbox for student media now extends to digital distribution. But if Content is King, and we have the digital platform to go along with traditional audio and video, are we making the best use of the tools? Panelists from different student media environments will demonstrate what works in their department and provide creative insights that you can take back to your department.

New Directions in Social Media: Tools and their Impact on Media Consumption [Session ID: 1094013]
Pavilion 11
[International]
The power of social media as a globalizing agent is a popular topic among communication scholars and professionals. However, social media - both as catalyst and barrier to cultural development as it pertains to Internet media consumption - has rarely been investigated. As a result, society has in a sense been reshaped and inevitably has formed a new phenomenon. To accurately assess the impact of social media trend and its power to influence the masses - audience, industry and academia alike - one must first analyze and understand its context and complexity. This panel consisting of academic professionals, also active in the field, will review how the ever-evolving content, function, design and ownership foster a robust as well as augmented ‘cloud environment’.

Bigger Shield, Bigger Burden? The Practical Problems of Updating Reporter Shield Laws to Include Independent, Nontraditional Journalists [Session ID: 1093890]
Conference Room 4/5
[Law & Policy | News]
What happens when professional news media won’t support a proposal to update and expand a state’s reporter shield law? A Nevada legislative advisory group recently found out, when the state’s press association balked over worries that legislators might choose to weaken a treasured legal asset. This panel would use the Nevada experience to launch a broader discussion about practical problems that face policymaking efforts to shield nontraditional journalists at the state and federal level.

Production Aesthetics & Criticism Division Business Meeting [Session ID: 1114368]

Pavilion 2

[Production Aesthetics & Criticism]

The Production Aesthetics & Criticism Division's purpose is the improvement of teaching and the fostering of research and innovations in audio and video production, aesthetics and criticism. The division provides a forum for the exchange of teaching techniques and material; the presentation of juried and non-juried scholarly research; the presentation of faculty and student productions; the demonstration and discussion of innovations in production equipment and techniques; and as a means of evaluation through juried competition of scholarly research and faculty production. Members are involved in the supervision of the only collegiate, association-wide, peer review faculty production competition, that provides valuable feedback and credibility often needed in promotion and tenure reviews.

The PITCH Session: Tell Your Story Idea to an Industry Professional! [Session ID: 1093117]

Pavilion 3

[Writing]

Many wonderful stories and scripts go unproduced because the author or originator has not or can not make a convincing oral summary (or "pitch") of its value, appeal, and marketability to a producer or agent. In this annual panel, we encourage all student BEA attendees to "pitch" their story to industry professionals, who will evaluate the "pitch" and their script's merit in the current marketplace.

Welcome to BEA’s Sports Division, established in April 2008. For a long time sports wore the tag of the ‘toy store.’ No serious study of the media could include a look at sports. But, times have changed. Academics as well as non-academics have seen that, for better or worse, sports are an essential element of U.S. and worldwide culture. This has led to a surge in academic organizations that recognize and embrace sports as a legitimate intellectual pursuit. A number of academic journals have been developed all devoted to sports, and schools that have sports-related classes, and even majors, are growing in number as we speak.

As a follow up to last year's panel, leveraging social media 2.0 will focus less on social media platforms and more on how to craft engaging content and how it changes by platforms. What we post on Instagram needs to be different than what goes on Facebook. While the image may be the same, the copy/text needs to be tailored for the specific platform and audience. Not only is using social media necessary, but the understanding how the content we're posting/sharing is being consumed is as well.

| 4:30 AM – 5:45 AM | Writing for the Hashtag?: Examining the Relationship Between TV Authorship and Social Media Marketing [Session ID: 1093895] |
| Pavilion 11 | (Interactive Media and Emerging Technologies | Production Aesthetics & Criticism)                                   |
| Networks have gone to great lengths to maintain live viewership in a landscape that challenges traditional consumption patterns. This often involves driving the conversation to social media via now-ubiquitous on-screen hashtags. A successful “social” television series represents a marketing coup and, due to the impetus of viewers to watch live, an ad revenue windfall. But how does the marketing need affect the creative enterprise? This panel examines the relationships between writers/producers and marketing departments, how social media has potentially altered those relationships, and what the future may hold. |

Heather Birks, Broadcast Education Association

8:30 AM - 9:45 AM

Division Business Meetings

Gender & Sexuality Division Business Meeting [Session ID: 1114610] – Ballroom F

The Gender & Sexuality Division stimulates awareness and discussion of existing issues and problems related to gender concerns in the media and media education; encourages dissemination of information about impact of gender issues to professional colleagues in the field; leads discussion on issues of promotion and tenure related to gender; fosters and promotes the teaching of issues focusing on gender related concerns as a substantive area of study within the disciplines of broadcasting/media.

Chair: Lisa Pecot-Hebert, University of Southern California
Vice Chair: Casey Hart, Stephen F. Austin State University
Paper Competition Chair: James Lohrey, Mercyhurst University
Communication Manager: Jennifer Meadows, California State University – Chico

History Division Business Meeting [Session ID: 1114615] – Pavilion 1

The History Division is concerned with teaching history and conducting scholarship in the field. Members are involved in classroom teaching and in the recording and analysis of historical events relating to the electronic media. Their goals are to encourage and continually improve teaching in the area; to provide a forum for the presentation of original scholarship; to share ideas and resources in the field; and to encourage preservation of historical materials.

Chair: Stephen Perry, Regent University
Vice-Chair/ Paper Competition Chair: Ed Youngblood, Auburn University
Webmaster & Newsletter Editor: James R. Schiffman, Georgia College & State University

Interactive Media & Emerging Technologies Division Business Meeting [Session ID: 1114621] – Pavilion 10

IMET’s mission is to keep members informed about the latest advances in communication technology including hardware, teaching and research. Their goals are to address needs of BEA members in teaching courses dealing with Interactive Media & Emerging Technologies; to help us prepare our graduates and ourselves for changes in the media landscape; to provide a forum for presentation and discussion of theory and research on emerging communication technologies; and to keep members of the organization informed about changes in communication technology and how those changes will affect broadcast education.

Chair: Jacob Enfield, California State University-Northridge
Vice-Chair/Paper Competition Chair: Heather Starr Fiedler, Point Park University
Faculty Festival Interactive Multimedia Chair: Lakshmi Tirumala, University of Cincinnati

Secretary: Linda Thorsen Bond, Stephen F. Austin State University
Webmaster: Leigh Wright, Murray State University
International Division Business Meeting [Session ID: 1114628] - Conference Room 1/2

International members are involved in areas such as telecommunications business practices, comparative systems of broadcasting & journalism, and international regulatory practices. The division’s goals/objectives are to provide a forum for research and discussions on international communication; to provide regular opportunities for members to update their information and skills resulting from changes in the field of international communication; and to encourage the international exchange of faculty and students for purposes of research, teaching and consulting.

Chair: Deborah Wilson David, University of Lincoln
Vice Chair: Tom Christie, University of Texas – Arlington
Research Paper Chair: Quan Xie, Bradley University
Webmaster: Michael Huntsberger, Linfield College
Newsletter Chair: Erika Grodzki, Lynn University

Law & Policy Division Business Meeting [Session ID: 1114622] - Pavilion 11

L & P’s mission is to assist fellow teachers, researchers and practitioners in electronic media Law & Policy. Their goals and objectives are to foster ownership of the process of educating potential electronic media leaders and teachers about law; to prepare electronic media students for leadership roles by providing meaning to the phrase "the public interest, convenience and necessity"; to instill the notion of the "public interest" among potential users and leaders of the electronic media; to help new teachers of L & P by initiating and continuing a dialogue about the process of teaching in this area; to foster discussion about the nature of the Curriculum of Law & Policy; to educate potential users about their responsibilities to use the mass media as mechanisms for social change and improvement; and to initiate research into the fields of Law & Policy.

Chair: David Joseph Deeley, University of North Florida
Vice-Chair/Paper Competition Chair: Heather Polinsky, Central Michigan University
Communications Director: Kevin Johnson, California State University - Long Beach

Management, Marketing and Programming Division Business Meeting [Session ID: 1114617] - Pavilion 2

MMP’s mission is to (1) enhance the teaching and research of electronic media management, sales and programming, (2) Provide a forum for the presentation of juried and non-juried scholarly research in those areas, (3) Enhance networking between faculty and management, sales and programming professionals, and to (4) Provide a forum for the exchange of effective learning and teaching techniques.

Chair: L. Meghan Mahoney, West Chester University of Pennsylvania
Vice Chair/Paper Competition Chair: Miao Guo, Ball State University
Communication Manager: Xiaoqun Zhang, University of North Texas
Graduate Student Liaison: Brandon Sweitzer, Ohio University

Multicultural Studies Division Business Meeting [Session ID: 1114374] - Conference Room 4/5

Multicultural Studies Division was founded to provide a specific forum for addressing concerns of the relationship between traditionally underrepresented groups - especially racial and ethnic groups (i.e., African, Hispanic, Asian and Native American (ANANA) - and the electronic media. The division also provides a forum for discussion of issues and presentation of research on issues of portrayal, employment and entrepreneurship and the academy's response to teaching these issues. Their goals are to increase the level of awareness of the contributions and concerns of AHANA members and other traditionally underrepresented groups; to encourage more research on topics related to AHANA members and other traditionally underrepresented groups; and to encourage electronic media curricular acknowledgment of the contributions and concerns of AHANA members and other traditionally underrepresented groups.

Chair: Phillip Powell, Valparaiso University
Vice Chair: Victor Evans, Walden University
Paper Chair: Chetachi A. Egwu, Nova Southeastern University
Communications Coordinator: Lillian Williams, Columbia College

Research Division Business Meeting [Session ID: 1114613] - Ballroom G

The Research Division supports the work of BEA members whose interests include telecommunication research, methodology and interests not served by other divisions. No methodology is excluded. Their goals are to encourage all BEA members interested in research to join the division; to provide forums for discussion on issues in broadcast and electronic media research; and to provide leadership roles in shaping the future of broadcast and electronic media research.

Stream Kings: People of Color Leveraging New Social Media Platforms [Session ID: 1093902]
Conference Room 4/5
[Multicultural Studies]
Social media continues to be a pervasive part of daily life, particularly for those often rendered voiceless in our society. New platforms such as Meerkat, Periscope and Blab have particularly taken flight, spawning new content and formats. This panel will be a mixture of research and demonstration, and will explore how people of color leverage these newer forms of social media. There will also be live demonstrations with key influencers on these platforms.

Digital Media and Business Model Innovation [Session ID: 1093647]
Pavilion 2
[Management, Marketing and Programming]
Business Model Innovation involves creating entirely new approaches for doing business. Business model innovation is transformative; that is, it redefines the competitive playing field by introducing an entirely new value proposition to the consumer. The proposed panel session represents a unique opportunity to look at the importance of innovation and innovative thinking to the long term success of today's leading media and telecommunications companies. Specifically, it will address two important questions. First, what does it mean to be an innovative media business enterprise? Second, how has business model innovation been used to transform the field of media and electronic commerce?

Radio and Audio Talent: Recruiting, Mentoring, Developing in Today's Business Model
[Session ID: 1093406]
Pavilion 3
[Radio & Audio Media]
In today's business it's been difficult to find and develop talent. In some respects podcasts and other entrepreneurial endeavors are taking the place of the “starter” radio jobs. In large markets, entertainment and sports stars, and other media ‘elites’ are taking plum audio/radio jobs. We are concerned about the training, mentoring, and nurturing of young professionals in the business. This panel is instructive for professionals, and for students and educators.

[Production Aesthetics & Criticism | Curriculum, Assessment and Administration]

Due to the hierarchical organizational structure of departments and colleges in U.S. institutions of higher education, there is tendency to focus curricular and extracurricular efforts internally within colleges. This phenomenon comes at the expense of building bridges to departments in other colleges and to external agencies (governmental and non-profit). This session will explore possible solutions to building symbiotic bridges to departments outside media-oriented colleges and to external organizations for the purpose of seeking funded production and research opportunities for students and faculty. Four case studies will be presented on how successful collaboration with external departments and agencies led to a broadening of production, research, and curricular opportunities for students and faculty at large public universities.

BEA Exhibit Hall, Content Lounge

[All Convention]

The Journal of Radio & Audio Media (JRAM) is a semiannual publication designed to promote scholarly dialogues generated by various disciplinary and methodological points of view. The Journal welcomes interdisciplinary inquiries regarding radio's contemporary and historical subject matter as well as those audio media that have challenged radio’s traditional use. Scholars are invited to submit articles pertaining to any area of radio and audio media. Areas of interest include, but are not limited to, formats and programming, new technology, policy and regulation, rating systems, commercial and noncommercial networks, radio history, management and innovation, personalities, popular cultures, uses and effects studies, propaganda, social movements, advertising and sales, market concentration, Internet and satellite radio, podcasting, alternative formats, diversity, gender and international radio.

Meet with JRAM editor Phylis Johnson, Southern Illinois University to discuss getting your research published.

[History | Radio | Research]

Cynthia B. Meyers’ A Word from Our Sponsor: Admen, Advertising, and the Golden Age of Radio provides a detailed analysis of the formative role the advertising industry played in constructing US network broadcasting. Relying on a fresh survey of neglected archival sources, the book revises traditional historical accounts of the “golden age” of radio by revealing the role of sponsors and admen behind the scenes. Sponsors turned to their advertising agencies to produce—and often cast and script—their programs in order to ensure their selling goals would be effectively integrated into broadcast entertainment. Meyers explicates the dynamic interchange of culture and commerce in 1930s-40s broadcasting by comparing and contrasting the competing beliefs about effective advertising and entertainment strategies employed by different advertising agencies. For example, Blackett-Sample-Hummert applied repetitive “hard sell” strategies to its dozens of daytime soap operas such as Ma Perkins; Young & Rubicam humorously interwove the soft sell into Jack Benny and Fred Allen’s comedy programs; BBDO polished the corporate image of the embattled chemical company DuPont in the historical docudrama Cavalcade of America; and J. Walter Thompson exploited celebrity associations by using Hollywood star-power in Kraft Music Hall and Lux Radio Theatre. As advertisers today once again experiment with “branded entertainment” to reach audiences, A Word from Our Sponsor provides insight into the key issues that continue to motivate many of the most significant developments in American commercial broadcasting.

Feminism: It’s Not a Dirty Word Anymore. A New Era of Feminist Media [Session ID: 1093980]

Conference Room 4/5

[Gender & Sexuality]

We are in the midst of a new era of feminist media content creation. Whether television, film, or social media, women-centric programming is having a surge of popularity. Much of that content is either directly or indirectly challenging the traditional patriarchal media system. While women continue to be underrepresented on screen and behind the scenes, organizations such as the Geena Davis Institute on Gender in Media and Amy Poehler’s "Smart Girls" campaign are addressing gender disparity head-on. Meanwhile, shows like the Amy Schumer Show, Broad City, Girls and others are using third-wave feminist ideals as building blocks for their narratives. This panel will analyze this trend and attempt to predict its future.

This session will review Professor Brotman’s work over several decades to create communications scholarship that can be utilized by government policymakers at all levels. This scholarship balances academic methodologies and rigor with a design that will make it useful in informal and formal policymaking proceedings. Case study examples will be presented to illustrate this method and its outcomes.

Stuart N. Brotman is the inaugural Howard Distinguished Endowed Professor of Media Management and Law and Beaman Professor of Communication and Information at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville. He served as the Fulbright-Nokia Distinguished Chair in Information and Communications Technologies in the Faculty of Social Sciences, Department of Social Research/Media and Communication Studies, at the University of Helsinki.

At Harvard Law School, he was the first person ever appointed to teach telecommunications law and policy and served as a faculty member and as its first Research Fellow in Entertainment and Media Law. He also served as the first concurrent fellow in digital media at Harvard and MIT, at the Berkman Center for Internet and Society and the Program on Comparative Media Studies, respectively.

Brotman is the editor of The Telecommunications Deregulation Sourcebook, a popular reference volume covering the broadcasting, cable television and telephone industries; Telephone Company and Cable Television Competition, a pioneering anthology dealing with technical, economic and regulatory aspects of broadband networks; and the author of Broadcasters Can Negotiate Anything, a best-selling management education book for radio and television executives. He also is the author of Communications Law and Practice, the leading comprehensive treatise covering domestic and international telecommunications and electronic mass media regulation.

In this lively, interactive master class, producer Adam Leipzig and editor Mindy Elliott will reveal techniques for pulling films together – brick by brick, frame by frame, with trade secrets and stories that are as applicable to student projects as gigantic studio tentpoles. They will draw on their current collaboration, the breakthrough adventure documentary A PLASTIC OCEAN, which will be released later this year, and the fifty-plus feature films and televisions shows they have worked on -- from big-budget studio movies to credit-card-financed indie documentaries. Adam and Mindy have worked with notable directors including Peter Weir, Alexander Payne, Julie Taymor, Peter Yates, Jon Turteltaub, and Robert Benton, and also directors at the beginnings of their careers. What have they learned? It all comes down to storytelling, problem-solving, collaboration and communication... which they look forward to sharing with all of you.

Teaching Longform in a Shortform World [Session ID: 1093129]
Conference Room 4/5
[Curriculum, Assessment and Administration]
This panel demonstrates the steps that take storytelling from a news item all the way to a screenplay. Linda Thorsen Bond, Samuel Edsal and Warren Lewis talk about teaching students how their work can graduate from a news story to a television assignment to a screenplay. “Writing the Longform.” In Bond’s master’s level class, students write a long non-fiction article in stages. They learn to evaluate news for potential stories, find the focus, do research, delve into “place,” interview people, and engage all their senses—then write the kind of long non-fiction article that can win Pulitzer prizes. “Based on true events: Using the facts of a news story to create dramatic truth in a screenplay.” From the earliest days of the cinema to the current prestigious award season offerings, the “true story” has been a source for screenplay adaptation, a selling point for the resulting films, a marketing tool for executives. This presentation will discuss using the news story as a basis for the creation of a strong dramatic narrative populated by well-defined characters to create the "world" of a screenplay and inform, enlighten and most importantly, entertain an increasingly global audience.

A Conversation with Bruce Rosenblum [Session ID: 1131839]

Pavilion 3
[All Convention]

Regarded as one of today’s most innovative media and entertainment executives, Bruce Rosenblum is currently serving his second term as chairman & CEO of the Academy of Television Arts & Sciences, and was recently president of Legendary Television and Digital Media, the Legendary division charged with producing programming across multiple linear and non-linear on-demand platforms on a global basis, as well as the development of global multi-platform digital distribution opportunities for broadband, mobile and emerging technologies. Rosenblum was responsible for overseeing Legendary’s business model for this fast-growing initiative, as the company looks to deploy its signature content across multiple formats and devices.

Rosenblum left an indelible mark on the media industry while serving for 26 years at Warner Bros., the last 14 of which overseeing the entire Warner Bros. portfolio of television businesses, including worldwide production, traditional and digital distribution globally, and broadcasting. With more than two decades at Warner Bros., Rosenblum was widely recognized for leading an unparalleled executive team and defining the company’s television business, which, under his watch, consistently contributed half of Warner Bros. Entertainment’s yearly profits.

Two-Year/Small Colleges Business Meeting [Session ID: 1120428]

Pavilion 9
[Two-Year/Small Colleges]
The Two-Year/Small Colleges Division's mission is to provide a forum for issues unique to the teaching and operation of a program of broadcast education at a community college, a small college or in a small broadcasting program. Their goals are to share and propagate teaching strategies; to enhance and promote the teaching of lower division courses in broadcasting; to promote and encourage the transferability of broadcasting courses between institutions; to facilitate the interaction of faculty with broadcasters and media practitioners; to promote the study of broadcasting across academic disciplines; and to promote the use of broadcast facilities to support broadcast education. The 2-year/small college division member faculty, staff and students are employed by or matriculated in a community college or a small college that offers a broadcast related major (such as broadcasting, video production, mass media and communications.) A small college is defined as a college with a broadcast related major/division with an enrollment of fewer than 200 students.

Freedom of Information Laws and Newsrooms: Digital Mining Tools for News Content Sharing Networks
[Session ID: 1093493]
Ballroom F
[News | International]
Content moves swiftly across ever-evolving internet platforms, and educational transnational content partnerships are vital to develop a media education system supporting the continued pursuit of content as king. Digital mining tools empower newsrooms with data made readily available to us by the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA). Today, Latin American countries are emulating FOIA and enacting laws that will help fight corruption and cronyism. In a globalized world with intertwined economies, journalism depends on a global approach to local problems via virtual environments.

Using Certification Curriculum and Materials in Undergraduate Classes [Session ID: 1093668]
Conference Room 1/2
[Curriculum, Assessment and Administration]
Most technology companies, including Avid, Adobe, and Apple, have training divisions that create course content to prepare users for their professional certifications. The materials are typically designed for the working professional, comprised of full days of training. But with some improvisation and imagination, they can be integrated into traditional semester-long undergraduate classes. A professional certificate can be a powerful motivational force for undergraduate production students.

Breaking the Silence of Visual Politics of War on Terror [Session ID: 1079875]

In recent years, we have been witness to an unprecedented emergence of new forms of visual politics, in particular when it comes to terror, crises, conflicts, and wars. Today, the visible shift from traditional wars into mediatized wars, from traditional reporting into emotional reporting, from traditional entities of parties to movements, and from the sovereign nation state to autonomous spaces, identities and practices, makes such blindness on the part of the academic discipline of visual politics even more marked. In brief, the video is the missile and we can use it to attain any goal. This panel examines the visual media culture of war and terror within the new parameters of globalization. The ubiquitous encounters with violence require a new form of visual literacy that highlights the intersection of the local and the global, & recognizes the ways in which visual technologies, cultural politics of memory and history, national ideologies, and the collusion of journalism practices and militarism intervene in the formation of visual culture of violence. The panel attempts to trace the impact of the visual politics of war that has brought about how enormous emotional powers and human pains. It also provides fresh insights into the reasons for these cruelties, by questioning the accountability of media, politics and the military in fighting terrorism and promoting freedom.

The Uneasy Relationship Between Sports and Gambling [Session ID: 1079376]

The multi-billion dollar sports gambling industry has often come under attack for fostering an environment that encourages point-shaving or game fixing. The gambling industry counters that gambling on sporting events would take place even if legalized sports gambling didn't exist. The oversight from Nevada's sports books and related industries helps prevent much of the illegal activity. This panel of professionals will give attendees an inside look at the Nevada sports gambling industry and discuss the role of the media, especially in the area of college sports.

Current Issues in Law and Policy [Session ID: 1093648]

Ballroom F
[Law & Policy]

This longest continuously-offered convention session in BEA history again this year looks at a wide range of important legal and policy issues. These are issues being addressed by Congress, the Administration, the FCC and other agencies, as well as in the courts, the states and in academia. Representatives of the federal government and industry trade associations, plus leading communications law and technical experts, will provide attendees with insights and answers on key topics relating to electronic communications and media. Barry Umansky, a BEA past-president and former deputy general counsel of the National Association of Broadcasters, will moderate the session and pose questions to panelists. Following commentary by the expert panel, session attendees will be able to voice their own questions to the presenters.

Whoever Said “You HAVE to See It To Believe It” Should Know: Storytelling Through Audio is the GOAT (Greatest Of All Times)! [Session ID: 1093441]
Conference Room 4/5
[Radio & Audio Media | Production Aesthetics & Criticism]
Great storytelling is expected, from freelancer to seasoned reporters. One medium that still reigns supreme in telling stories to the masses using sound is radio. Teaching how to tell stories that reach the heart and mind through the ear isn’t a lost art. With podcasting’s resurgence, the popularity of public radio, it's imperative compelling stories be told through sound. Once taught, stories can be shared across the Internet in an easy and simple way. The "Theater of the Mind," an oldie but goodie where content truly is still king.

Using Sports as a Way to Integrate Broadcasting with Advertising and Public Relations [Session ID: 1093713]

Pavilion 1
[Sports]
Without questions sports is becoming a popular major or area of emphasis in journalism programs. Finding areas of crossover for majors can sometimes be tough for programs looking to be integrated. UNL has found a way to incorporate journalistic storytelling with the storytelling of Advertising and Public Relations. It involves an annual state sporting event that takes place every summer. And it’s a great way to develop strong partnerships in the community and help with recruiting.

Dual Enrollment: Double the Challenge [Session ID: 1077286]

Pavilion 10
[Two-Year/Small Colleges]

Two-year colleges are entering into more and more articulation agreements with area high schools to build enrollment and a stronger pipeline from the high school to the local community college. Community Colleges are opening points of access via dual enrollment classes in the high school (where the high school teacher teaches college course content and the community college grants credit), career academies (where high school students come to the local community college to get a head start on college course work, and 2+2+2 programs where high schools, community colleges and four-year colleges establish articulation agreements. Are these programs working and how do we ensure academic rigor?

In 1967, President Lyndon Johnson responded to urban disturbances in several U.S. cities by convening an investigatory commission to examine conditions leading up to the unrest. The Kerner Report underscored how institutional and explicit anti-black racism, police brutality, concentrated poverty, and political disenfranchisement merged to generate civil disorder across the nation. The report also strongly criticized major media's poor coverage of urban the uprisings, warning that a “significant imbalance” between reality and news reports of the riots was exacerbating the schism between the country's “two societies, one black, one white—separate and unequal.” The report concluded: “Along with the country as a whole, the press has too long basked in a white world, looking out of it, if at all, with white men's eyes and a white perspective.”

In the last two years, as America has endured civil unrest in Ferguson, MO, Baltimore, MD, and elsewhere, it appears that little has changed in media representations of race, gender and power.

This presentation considers how recent media events in popular culture demonstrate that fifty years after Kerner, white perspectives continue to dominate our media culture and society—which in turn, shape both our understanding of race and representations of Blackness. Using conceptual frameworks of Critical Race Theory and whiteness studies, the presentation examines mediated performances from this year's Super Bowl and Grammy Awards. Using an participatory approach, the presentation will allow for audience interaction on a range of contemporary issues in race, gender and media.

Dr. Dwight Brooks (Ph.D., University of Iowa) is Vice Dean of the Lawrence Herbert School of Communication at Hofstra University. Prior to coming to Hofstra in 2015, Brooks was professor and director of the School of Journalism at Middle Tennessee State University, where he led the transition from a print to multimedia program. He has also held positions at Jackson State University, the University of Georgia, Indiana University, Bloomington, and Illinois State University. His teaching and research interests include media representations of race, class and gender and media literacy. His work has been published in Journalism & Communication Monographs, the Howard Journal of Communications, the Journal of Radio Studies, and Journalism and Mass Communication Educator among others.

Virtual Worlds, Virtual Reality and Mixed Reality, in Theory and Praxis: Immersive Storytelling & Audience Engagement from Cyberspace [Session ID: 1093955]
Ballroom G
[Interactive Media and Emerging Technologies | Production Aesthetics & Criticism]
This panel offers a glimpse of research and practices in virtual worlds, virtual realities, and mixed realities as they impact broadcast and related industries. As an onslaught of cyber hype comes our way in terms of promos, headlines, and banter across social media, our panelists offer a glimpse of how our industry will be impacted in undeniable ways in the next five years. At the pinnacle of these threads is storytelling; the technologies might be there, but what will we say? How will our audiences respond? How will storytelling be impacted, and what stories will we tell? Topics cover the research behind augmented and virtual realities (the state of, and effects) as well as some instances already in play including immersive news, virtual production/engineering, and virtual/mixed reality radio.

Media Convergence: Transitioning the Curriculum to Content Production Across Multiple Platforms [Session ID: 1077282]
Pavilion 2
[Two-Year/Small Colleges]

Consumers receive media content in a variety of ways. With social media platforms growing exponentially, traditional and non-traditional media outlets producing content for mobile devices, and fewer and fewer consumers solely watching television or listening to radio, the next generation of content producers will need to be able to tell their story across multiple platforms. This panel will describe measures they have taken to make this transition.

New Storytelling Pioneers Talk About How They Make Content King [Session ID: 1093582]

Pavilion 3
[Writing | Interactive Media and Emerging Technologies]

How has YouTube become such an important channel for storytellers? Prominent YouTube storytellers, and possibly a YouTube executive, will discuss how YouTube and Google’s audience measurement capabilities enable them to more effectively produce stories that appeal to their audiences. We believe this “conversation with” should be an all-conference, plenary session. This would be immediately followed with a second panel, comprised of media educators, focusing on how educators can help prepare students to think broadly and inclusively about media production and distribution.

Moderator:  Larry Elin, Syracuse University
Panelists:  Tyler Gildin, head of production, Elite Daily, an online site for 20-somethings, with video storytelling
Rachel Samples, Creative Strategist, Collab; a company that has pioneered the 6-second Vine storytelling phenom
Ciara Schoenauer, Junior Digital Influencer Strategist; Epic Signal & working on a new digital series for Amazon

The Old Story Is Dead: Long Live The New Story [Session ID: 1093580]

Pavilion 3
[Writing | Interactive Media and Emerging Technologies]

An old Hollywood adage states that “story is king.” This has been replaced with a new mantra; “audience is king.” And the new audience craves innovative stories that resonate with compelling content and “anywhere, anytime, anyway” delivery. This panel will focus on how media education and media educators can help students think broadly and inclusively about media production, including how educators are/can/should help students prepare for a more technologically disruptive, increasingly diverse, and more individually and independently focused media world.

Moderator:  Rustin Greene, James Madison University
Panelists:  Marie Elliott, Valdosta State University
Edward J. Fink, California State University, Fullerton
Rustin Greene, James Madison University
Keren Henderson, Syracuse University
Michael R. Ogden, Zayed University

Part II-Distributed Authorship in Creative Media: Will It Pass Muster for Promotion & Tenure? [Session ID: 1093695]

Pavilion 9
[Courses, Curricula & Administration]

Last year, panelists explored the notion of distributed authorship in creative media as it relates to promotion and tenure, but more time was needed for discussion. Thus, this panel is proposed as the second part of that discussion so as to explore issues related to branded content creation, electronic billboard production, filmmaking, digital media production, and static and motion graphic design. Additionally, discussion will touch on conflicting comments from journal reviewers and those tasked with assessing the value and worth of creative media.

Moderator:  Bradford L. Yates, University of West Georgia
Panelists:  Paul MacArthur, Utica College
Vanessa T. Ament, Ball State University
Fritz J. Messere, SUNY - Oswego

Drones Among Us: The Use of UAVs as a Storytelling Tool [Session ID: 1093133]
Pavilion 11
[Interactive Media and Emerging Technologies | Law & Policy]
The use of UAVs or “Drones” has increased greatly in the last couple of years, primarily due to the easy access and affordability of these tools. But this increase has put the use of drones in the media for lots of negative reasons as well. This panel will discuss the use of drones as a storytelling tool, both the good and the bad. It will also discuss how to choose a drone, get “certified” by the FAA, and how to implement a safe and effective program at your college if you are thinking about purchasing one.
Moderator: Stephen Price, University of Central Missouri

TV News Live Shots after the WDBJ Shootings [Session ID: 1093971]

Ballroom F

[News]

Live shots have been a staple of TV news since that first live experience in the mid-70's. Newsrooms across the country were thrown into shock when a routine live shot ended in the deadly shooting of the reporter and photographer. The initial reaction of many of our students was fear. This panel will examine what changes, if any, are being discussed in newsrooms about live shots. Is there a way to make live shots safer, or is that even a concern?

Moderator: Mary T. Rogus, Ohio University

Panelists: Sally Ann Cruikshank, Auburn University

Hagit Limor, University of Cincinnati

Television and Socialization [Session ID: 1082878]
Conference Room 4/5
[Multicultural Studies]
Perceptions of reality are developed from experiences in conjunction with the social world—either real or symbolic. There are no individually constructed realities. Television is a major contributor to reality construction. The messages and the images disseminated, confirm and disconfirm perceptions of phenomena. For many, seeing is believing. Television's influence on political and social attitudes can be very powerful. This panel examines television's impact upon socialization in five areas: television news, advertising, political communication, film and sports.

Projection Mapping and Augmented Reality [Session ID: 1093698]
Ballroom F
[Interactive Media and Emerging Technologies]
This is a projection mapping and compositing workshop. Projection mapping, or video mapping is a technique that consists of projecting imagery onto buildings, structures, and other 3d surfaces. Compositing is the manipulation and combination of at least two source images. Projection mapping uses combined source images such as drawings, video, and rendered animation and projects them into real 3d space. This technique can be used in various media displays in advertising, film/theater, or other visual presentations. Speaker will provide a simple work flow to implement projection mapping using a laptop and a projector. This work flow will cover the preparation, setup, masking, animation, and the final projection outputted to be mapped in real space. The software tools used are Photoshop, After Effects, Modul8, and Madmapper.

Content is Still King: Exploring the Unexpected Consequences of Radio Programming [Session ID: 1093689]

Ballroom G
[Radio & Audio Media]
Radio content is at a premium in the current digital landscape. The question is how do radio content producers continue to draw an audience for niche programming with so many options available? Perhaps the answer is because of the unexpected consequences that are a result of specific content. For example, Sirius XM’s E Street Radio channel has expanded the community of Bruce Springsteen fans far beyond anything the founders of the fanzines or concertgoers would ever have imagined. And, educators have at their disposal an endless supply of content that serves as primary and supplemental teaching resources via podcasts and radio stations from across the globe. This panel will explore these unexpected consequences of radio programming and argue that content is still king in the world of radio.

Sports Broadcasting Program Showcase [Session ID: 1093853]

Pavilion 2
[Sports]

This session will feature panelists from several university programs that produce sports programming. The programs may come in the forms of sports segments in radio or television newscasts, weekly shows or specials. The program carriers vary from campus closed circuit to community cable to public broadcasting stations. Some universities have full fledged sports majors while other colleges include sports activities as part of a general broadcast major. The panelists will highlight their programs including how students, staff and faculty are involved in the process. The balancing act of how to both produce quality programing and provide students a positive learning experience at the same time will be discussed. Excerpts will be shared with the audience. The relationship between academics and the Athletic Department will also be considered.

The Ins and Outs of Integrating Student Showcases into Production Curriculum [Session ID: 1079514]

Pavilion 3
[Production Aesthetics & Criticism]

More and more media production educators are being asked for transparency and evidence that their students are being adequately prepared to tackle the highly competitive television and film fields. To this end, campuses are beginning to insist that completed student works be more visible to the public. This panel will discuss the unique challenges of incorporating student media showcases into production-based curriculum and recommend ways to overcome these challenges in order to raise campus, department and student visibility. Legal issues regarding ownership of student material, quality control and content of product, and potential pedagogical concerns regarding learning goals and competitive-based showcases and festivals will be addressed.

Framing Faith Beyond Religious Broadcast Media [Session ID: 1093667]
Conference Room 1/2
[Two-Year/Small Colleges]
In spite of the changes in technology that has made the transmission of messages fairly easy at an inexpensive price, many churches have been overlooked in the transition to new media and distribution possibilities. For those churches that do use new media technology, the use is infrequent or poorly done. Many churches are trying to find new and creative ways to use new media technologies and to reach younger audiences. Many college programs that could provide assistance as well as produce graduates who are dedicated to providing these services to local churches often overlook this career possibility when it comes to consulting, internships and jobs for graduates. This panel will discuss how small, private colleges with a religious mission can best prepare students for a whole range of careers in religious media.

Instant sharing and the dark side of social media: How do you draw the moral line on a story that will circulate with or without your coverage? [Session ID: 1093894]

Pavilion 10

[News]

In late August a former Virginia television news station employee killed two journalists on live TV and posted a string of messages on his Facebook and Twitter with grizzly videos detailing the murders. The killer’s social media accounts were immediately shut down, but not before the videos were shared widely and auto played in users’ feeds. Many media outlets followed suit, and published videos of murders. This tragic event points to the dark side of instant sharing on social media and poses a problem: there’s still no good way to quickly prevent destructive videos like this one from being shared once they’re released. In this panel, we will discuss the dilemma for the traditional media: how do you draw the moral line on a story that will circulate with or without your coverage? And should the fact that the suspect intended, and fueled the circulation, factor into the decision to cover the story?

Best Practices for Student Audio Production [Session ID: 1093694]

Panelists:
- Terry Likes, Tennessee State University
- Keith Brand, Rowan University
- Beth Leah Hoffman, University of San Francisco
- Richard Stroobant, SAIT Polytechnic

As journalism and mass communication programs evaluate their curricula in order to prepare student for future careers in media, the strength of audio should not be overlooked. For this panel veteran college professors will share their insights on teaching audio production – storytelling, editing, use of nat sound and more. Each panelist will also present sample work from their students for a mini-listening session.

Facilitating Effective and Productive Use of Tablets in the Production Classroom [Session ID: 1093407]

Panelists:
- James Carviou, Missouri Western State University
- Kathy Heuston, Austin Peay State University
- Kyle Hufford, Goshen College
- Daniel J. Mydlack, Towson University

Using tablets, phones, and other mobile devices as tools inside the college classroom has recently gained significant academic traction. Among these new tools and technological improvements, educators must remind students that story and content are still the most important pieces of the production puzzle. This panel will explore how media production faculty are teaching students to be powerful communicators and storytellers through the effective and productive use of these devices.

1:15 PM – 2:30 PM
Post-Convention Meeting [Session ID: 1185000]

This session is required for all interest division chairs. We'll be discussing interest division business with the chairs as well as going over BEA2017 deadlines.

One of 18 private universities in the nation accredited by ACEJMC

- One of 18 private universities in the nation accredited by ACEJMC
- More than 1,200 students and 60 full-time faculty members
- Undergraduate majors in Journalism, Strategic Communications, Cinema and Media Analytics
- A master’s program in Interactive Media
- Pioneered the Elon in LA program
- A grand atrium will connect the current facility with a new building that will feature a 250-seat movie theatre. Student media will be converged, and one of the current studios will become transparent to an outdoor plaza.

ARRIVING FALL 2016
One of the nation’s finest communications schools deserves one of the nation’s finest facilities. Elon University broke ground in summer 2015 on two new buildings that will merge with two existing buildings to create a Communications Commons in the heart of campus.
